HARDING WILL SUBMIT TREATY TO SENATE IN PERSON

LITTLE OPPOSITION IS EXPECTED THERE BY MR. UNDERWOOD

President Considers Treaty A Carrying Out of His Campaign Pledge To Bring A Productive Conference On Peace

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—President Harding will go to the Senate in person today or tomorrow to submit the armament treaties and open his fight for their ratification.

Harding's message, it is understood, will favor the declaration that the treaty involves no surrender of American sovereignty.

He will also assert that his campaign pledges relating to world concord through conference have been fulfilled.

The President has been advised by Senators Lodge and Underwood that little opposition is expected in the Senate, but it was advised that he present in person the achievements of the conference.

HEAVY TAXES PROPOSED BY WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE TO PAY THE BONUS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 10.—The Soldier Bonus will be paid by smokers, theatre goers, motorists, persons who buy real estate and those with checking accounts in banks, according to the plans of the House Ways and Means Committee today. Here are the proposed assessments to raise the required $350,000,000 annually for three years:

25c per horse power on automobiles.
3c per gallon on gasoline.
1c on each bank check.
A tax on each real estate transfer, probably 5c on each $10.00.
Increased tax on theatre admissions, 50c per thousand on cigarettes.
2c per pound on chewing and smoking tobacco.
A documentary tax.

These figures are tentative and may be changed. Complete agreement on the taxes to be levied is expected to be reached by the committee before tomorrow.

MRS. LILLIAN YOUNG, OF COOPER, GETS SIX CENTS FOR HER WOUNDED FEELINGS

The land of Cooper, that benighted country wherein both yeoman and yeomanette delights in calling "a spade a spade" and where the citizenry further delight in calling "everything and everybody by its or his or her first name, was again in the limelight for a few minutes at civil court this week when the case of Mrs. Lillian Young against Mrs. Verna Rothrock, was called for trial.

This case was the second slander or defamation of character case to come from down Cooper way in the past few months wherein the principals were the female of the species. Hangers on about the Court House settled back in their seats when the case of Young vs. Rothrock was called expecting to hear some rich, rare and racy details as the statement filed by the plaintiff when the suit was brought led one to believe that the defendant did not appear to be of the opinion that the also fair plaintiff was a really "perfect lady." In addition thereto, if the plaintiff fairly quoted her adversary, the defendant minced no words in establishing that fact unqualifiedly in the minds of all those within hearing of her voice, when she shouted at the top of a splendid pair of lungs that the object of her remarks was "this and so, and that was not 'very much' as the late Prof. John Mays, of Knox township, used to remark.

Howsoever and be that as it may we wander and digress like an old man in the sere and yellow leaf of time. What we started out to say was that the attorneys for the principals in Young vs. Rothrock got together, following the calling of the case, and after much legal quibbling, backing and filling, it was agreed by and between those severally there engaged that the remarks attributed to Mrs. Rothrock as being directed at Mrs. Young, aside from any correct measure or determination of truth or justification in the premises, had caused the person so addressed grievous injury and damage to her character, thus assailed, to the extent of six cents in good wholesome United States currency, and a jury of twelve good men and true, (two of whom were women) was then called and sworn and directed to return a verdict in accordance with the terms of the settlement agreed upon as aforesaid, which was therefore and thereupon accordingly done, and the said verdict was written into and upon the archives of the Common Pleas Court of Clearfield county, there to remain so long as the books endureth or until some sucker swipes the same from the Prothonotary's vault as was done several years ago with Docket No. 13 of the Quarter Sessions records.

This story is becoming entirely too voluminous for the recording of a simple six cent verdict, but we can't close until we further state that in cases of 6 cent damage verdicts the costs in the case do not follow the verdict, whereupon each side was required to pay its own costs, the total bill of which amounted to approximately $50 or $25 for each, which should leave a net difference of 6 cents between the parties, attorney fees and all other things being equal; each side being further privileged to determine in her own mind whether or not she got her money's worth.

INDIANA CITIZENS START BIG BOOM FOR MR. FISHER

Democrats Of City Join Republicans In Urging Popular Banking Commissioner To Run.

ALL ORGANIZED

Indiana, Pa., Feb. 7.—The gubernatorial boom of John S. Fisher state banking commissioner, was launched at a mass meeting in the court house here this afternoon, attended by several hundred men and women from all sections of Indiana county. As a result of the meeting a permanent organization to further the campaign of Mr. Fisher was organized and Wallace Thomas, Republican county chairman unanimously was elected president. The meeting adopted, in the form of a resolution, an open letter requesting Mr. Fisher to enter the contest for the Republican nomination.

The meeting, which is said to be the largest gathering of its kind ever held in Indiana county was unique in that it was attended by men and women representing different political parties and factions, and both Republicans and Democrats are members of the newly organized campaign committees. One of the speakers this afternoon was Miss Jane Leonard, of the Indiana State Normal school, who is a leader among the Democratic women of the county.

County Solid for Fisher
Republican leaders here expressed the opinion today that if Mr. Fisher will enter the primary contest he will find Indiana county solid behind him. They said the sentiment for the banking commissioner is spreading rapidly throughout the state, especially in Western Pennsylvania, and a number of other meetings throughout this section of the state will be held in the near future in an effort to have him announce himself as a candidate. The residence phase of the situation was stressed in the resolution adopted today.

The situation calls for a man of broad public acquaintance, experience in administration functions, tried integrity in public affairs and whose residence will appeal to the sense of fair play in the state geographical phase of politics. Twelve governors have served under the constitution of 1878, the resolution recited. Of this number but two have been called to serve from west of the Alleghenies. The west insists that it be accorded fair play in the selection of the next governor.

The officers of the permanent campaign committee elected today, besides Mr. Thomas are: Secretary and Treasurer, J. Blair Sutton of Indiana; vice presidents, Miss Leonard, Mrs.

NEW $400,000 HOME FOR ORPHANS GETS BIG BOOST HERE

Bishop Gannon Hears St. Francis Congregation Has Exceeded Its Quota By About $4000.

K. OF C. BANQUETS

The campaign for the soliciting of funds for the proposed new $400,000 orphanage to be erected at Erie by the Catholics of the Diocese of Erie was opened in this, the eastern district of Clearfield county, at a meeting held in Clearfield last evening which was attended by Rt. Reverend John Mark Gannon, D. D. Bishop of the diocese, Rev. Father Hurley, Director of Charities of the Diocese, the pastors of the different churches in this section of the county and prominent Catholics of each parish.

Before the plans for organizing the district were worked out a banquet was tendered Bishop Gannon at the Dimeling by the members of Clearfield Council Knights of Columbus.

J. P. O'Laughlin, Esq., presided at the banquet as toastmaster and introduced the guest of honor as the first speaker. Bishop Gannon talked most interestingly and entertainingly and for thirty minutes, devoting some little time to outlining local diocesan conditions as they relate to or are affected by world affairs and then stressed the need of an enlarged institution to take care of the orphans of the diocese. The present St. Joseph's orphanage was built by the late Bishop Tobias Mullen just 50 years ago. It cost $50,000 and at the time of its erection was rated as "the finest institution of its kind in Western Pennsylvania. It had a capacity of 200, but to clearly demonstrate the necessity for the new building, it is only needless to add that at present more than 300 little ones are being accommodated within its walls.

Bishop Gannon stated that the proposed building would be of steel and concrete and made absolutely fireproof, while all the modern equipment and advantages would also be provided. In making up the necessary budget for the construction of the new building each parish in the diocese was assessed with a minimum quota. The quota for St. Francis church was placed at $2500 and Bishop Gannon complimented Father Ryan and his Clearfield congregation on the fact that although the campaign for funds was just starting, Clearfield had already subscribed more than $10000 to the building fund.

Father Hurley was the next speaker. The Director of Charities gave a detailed report of the orphanage

CLEARFIELD COUNTY'S PLACE IN THE WORLD OF INDUSTRY VISUALIZED BY STATE DIRECTOR OF VITAL STATISTICS

Hoke Gottschall, State Official, Startles His Auditors With Figures On Our Resources.

REAL SURPRISES

Clearfield, Pa., Feb. 10.—Discussing industrial conditions in Clearfield County last evening, M. Hoke Gottschall, Director of the Bureau of Statistics and Information of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs, declared that in 1920, the County turned out industrial products having a value of $64,319,000.

Mr. Gottschall came here at the invitation of the Rotary Club and in opening his address he stated that Pennsylvania is now doing just what every individual business man in the state does annually—making an annual inventory of resources. He said that when Secretary of Internal Affairs James F. Woodward took office almost three years ago he immediately laid plans for an adequate survey of Pennsylvania industry in such a way that it would be possible to know what the respective communities of the state are doing industrially.

During the course of his talk Mr. Gottschall showed that Clearfield County in 1920 had a total of 300 industrial plants which gave employment to 18,098 persons. Of the total number of workers, 11,102 were Americans white, 310 were Americans colored, and 6,686 were foreigners. Another division of the employment figures shows that 17,557 were males and 541 females.

Industrial employees in 1920 were paid a total wage of $27,198,000 of which $26,918,900 was paid to male workers and $279,100 was paid to the female labor. The capital invested in the industries in the county amounted to $52,150,000.

Comparing 1920 figures with those of 1919, the speaker said that Clearfield County made a big step in industry for during the year 1919 the value of the products amounted to but $38,261,600. In that year 15,099 persons were employed who were paid a total wage of $16,914,100. The capital invested in 1919 was $31,985,000.

Mr. Gottschall showed that more than one half of the value of industrial products in Clearfield County in 1920 was represented by the products of mines and quarries, the total of this item being $33,837,700 of which $33,491,800 represented the value of bituminous coal. The second outstanding class of industry was represented by clay, glass and stone products which had a total of $9,542,900 of which $8,087,900 was the value of terra cotta and fire clay products. Leather and rubber goods stood next with a value of $5,708,900, while metals and metal products were fourth with a value of $4,835,100. Other classes of industry are as follows:

Building and contracting, $875,100; chemicals and allied products, $122,300; food and kindred products, $954,100; beverages, $187,900; lumber and its manufacture, $581,200; paper and printing industries, $444,700; textiles and textile products, $1,879,700; products of public service companies, $3,816,200; tobacco and its products, $12,400; miscellaneous, $819,800 of which $691,300 represented the value of bee-hive coke.

Discussing some of the quantities produced in Clearfield County, the speaker said that figures gathered by the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs showed that there were produced in the County, among other things, 3,200 tons of fertilizers, 23,629,100 building brick; 217,900 gallons of ice cream; 1,500 tons of manufactured ice; 32,700 dozen pairs of overalls; 2,500 dozen shirts; 1,600 tons of iron and steel bars; 1,200 tons of billets, blooms and slabs; 77,800 tons of pig iron; 7,300 pounds of nickel; 40,200 tons of clay; 7,622,200 tons of bituminous coal; 106,600 tons of sand and gravel and 115,200 tons of bee-hive coke.

Speaking of the bituminous output in the county, Mr. Gottschall showed Fine Musical Program And Many Invited Men Help To Enliven Best Meeting Of Rotary.

A. B. REED HONORED

The local Rotary Club meeting at the Hotel Jordan last evening was a highly interesting affair. It was the "Bring a Guest" meeting of the club and every member present had at least one guest with him and an assemblage of one hundred persons were seated at the command of President Ward O. Wilson when the "hostilities" opened with an onslaught upon the viands provided by Mine Host Jordan.

At the conclusion of the repast President Wilson carried through the regular business program and announced the appointment of the different committees for the coming quarter.

He then introduced Mrs. Cornelia Reeve, who favored the diners with a very delightful song. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Alice Smith. Mrs. Reeve, who needs no commendation in Clearfield, was at her best during the evening and her singing of the opening number and several other solos as the program was carried through was exceptionally fine, even for this noted soloist and earned for her the greatest appreciation and heartiest applause. Miss Smith's accompaniment added its full measure to the enjoyment of the different numbers.

Prof. Oscar W. Schaeffer also delighted the assemblage with a highly pleasing violin solo. He was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Schaeffer.

A pleasing feature of the meeting was the introduction to the Rotarians of A. B. Reed, the first honorary member of the Club, who was given that honor in recognition of his public spirited citizenship. Mr. Reed is a native Clearfielder, who never misses an opportunity to demonstrate his loyalty to the old home town and her institutions and is always ready and willing to give of his time and money to further any and every movement having for its object the welfare and advancement of Clearfield and her people. The Rotarians greeted the new member by rising to their feet and voicing their pleasure at his affiliation with them by a vigorous handclapping.

The Rotarians and their guests assembled last evening for the express purpose of listening to M. Hoke Gottschall, Director of the Bureau of Statistics and Information of the Pennsylvania Department of Internal Affairs at Harrisburg. Mr. Gottschall was scheduled to talk on industrial statistics of Clearfield county and he did. What this "figure hound" didn't know about Pennsylvania and Clearfield county in particular, isn't worth talking about. He is a pleasing speaker and held the earnest attention of his auditors for more than an hour with his most highly interesting facts and figures. His story was too important to pass by with this brief reference, and a more extended review of his remarks will be found elsewhere in this issue.

At the conclusion of Mr. Gottschall's interesting and highly instructive remarks, the only "Uncle Joe" Bensinger, the man who made DuBois famous the past twenty years, was introduced by President Wilson. Uncle Joe is now connected with the Department of Internal Affairs, and after telling how glad he was to again have the opportunity of addressing a crowd of "home folks" he spoke briefly of the work of his department and paid a pretty compliment to the speaker of the evening.

Messrs Gottschall and Bensinger were on their way to DuBois, where they will address a joint meeting of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs of night.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Harriet Field, twenty-five, is old and beautiful. She is the secretary of the virtuous Mrs. Isabelle Carter, at "Crowlands," Richard Carter's home, and governess of 11-year-old Nina Carter. Ward, 15, is only four years older than Harriet, and is a very handsome young man. Harriet is a very serious young woman, and the youth of the family.

Shall a Woman be Bound by Her Past, if She Has Outlived It, Not in Years Only, but in Larger, Useful, Self-Sacrificing Life?

Harriet Field in the joyous trustfulness of youth and innocence, gave herself in a fanciful wedding ceremony which had no legal standing, to a suave adventurer. She had escaped. Now, nine years later, hiding her secret in service in the Carter family, the new life she had built was threatened. Harriet had listened to the music; how shall she pay the piper? Her momentous decision gives the story a meaning and a message.

A narrative remarkable in its handling of characters and situations, even for Kathleen Norris. Everyone should read it.

She was a woman worthy of the exquisite setting and might well have turned an older head than that of the boy beside her. Brunette, with smooth cheeks deeply touched with rose, black eyes, and a warmly crimson mouth that could be at once provocative and relentless, she glowed like a flower herself in the sweet and enervating heat of the summer's first warm day. She was the youngest of women, and the little foot, that, in its transparent silk stocking and buckled slipper, was close to Anthony's hand, was like a child's.

The man was twice her size, and as dark as she, earnest, eager, and today with a troubled expression clouding his face. It was to banish that look, if she might, that Isabelle had deliberately stopped him here.

She had been behaving badly toward him, and in her rather irresponsible and shallow way she was sorry for it. Isabelle was a famous flirt, her husband.

band knew it, everyone knew it. There was always some man paying desperate court to her, and always half-a-dozen other men who were eager to be in his place. Isabelle lived for this, went from one adventure to another with the naive confidence of a woman whose husband smiles upon her playing, and whose position is impregnable.

But this boy, this Anthony, was different. In the first place he was young—but twenty-six. In the second place he was, or had been, her own son's closest friend. Ward Carter was twenty-two, and his mother nineteen years older.

Anthony was young, and he was absurd, but he did not know it, and Isabelle began to feel the difficulty of keeping the whole world from discovering it before he did. He made no secret of his passion. He came straight to her in any company; he never looked at anybody else. To her own daughter Nina, seventeen years old, his attitude was almost paternal; he ignored Ward as if their friendship had never been.

Isabelle saw that she had made a mistake. She should have killed this affair at the very beginning. Tony was not like the older men, willing to play the game with just a little scorching of fingers. Appearance meant nothing to Tony, and she had let the play go too far now to convince him that she did not return something of his feeling.

She looked down at him now, content to be alone with her and at her feet, and a hundred mixed emotions stirred her. His feeling for her was not only pitiable and absurd in him, but it was rapidly reaching the point when it would make her absurd and pitiable, too. Nina, instinctively scenting the affair, had already expressed herself as "hating that idiot." Ward had scowled, of late, at the mere mention of Tony's name. Even her husband, the patient Richard, seeing the youth ensconce himself firmly beside her in the limousine, had had aside his mild comment: "Is this young man a fixture in our family, dear?"

"You should be playing tennis, Tony," said Isabelle.

"Tennis?" A look of distaste crossed Anthony's face.

"Please—Charlie!" he begged.

There was a silence brimming with sweetness and color. Tony laid his hand against her knee, groped until her own warm, smooth fingers were in his own.

"Does Mr. Carter play golf tomorrow?" he asked, presently.

"I suppose so."

"And you—what do you do?"

"Oh, I have a full day! People to lunch, friends of Madame Carter."

The boy laughed triumphantly.

"I knew you'd say that!" he said.

"Now, I'll tell you about tomorrow. You and I are going to slip away, at about one o'clock, and go off in the gray car. We'll go up to—well, somewhere, and we'll have our lunch under the trees. We'll be back at about four, for the tea callers, and they may have you until I come back for dinner. After dinner we'll walk on the terrace—as we did two wonderful, wonderful nights ago, and perhaps—" His voice had fallen to a rich and tender note, his eyes were rapt. "Perhaps," he said, "just before we go in, at the end of the terrace, you'll look up at the stars again."

"Tony!" Isabelle interrupted, her face brilliant with color. "My dear boy—my dear boy, think where this is going to end. In all reason—in all reason—"

"Isabelle, what in God's name has reason to do with it?" He knelt before her, and caught her hands, and Isabelle had a terrified fear that Ward, or Nina, or any one else, might start up or down the terrace steps and see him. "The instant you realize what you and I are to each other my darling," he said, "you begin to talk of reason. Love isn't reason, Charlie. It's the divinest unreason in the world! There, there's never been another woman for me; there never will be! I can't live without you; I don't want to! You're frightened now, you don't know how we can manage it. But I'll find the way. The only thing that matters is that you must belong to me—you shall belong to me—as I to you in every fiber of my being—"

"Tony—for Heaven's sake—" Isabelle was in an agony. Somebody was approaching. He had gotten to his feet, and was gloomily staring at the river, when Nina Carter, followed by a great white Russian hound, came flying down the steps.

"Mother—" Nina, a tall, overgrown girl, with spectacles on her straight nose, and straight, light-brown hair in thick bands stopped short and gave her mother's companion a look of withering distaste. "Mother," she began again, "aren't you coming up for tea?"

"Ask Betty Allen to pour," said Mrs. Carter, regarding her composure rapidly, and assuming the air of hostess at once.

"Betty went home for a tub," Nina explained. "She's coming back. But, Mother," she added, with a faintly reproachful and whining intonation, "really, you ought to be there—"

Mrs. Carter knew this as well as Nina. But she found the child extremely trying in this puritanical mood. Granting that this affair with Tony did her, Isabelle, small credit, at least it was not for Nina to sit in judgment. Rebellious, Isabelle fondled the loving nose of the hound with a small, brown, jeweled hand, and glanced dubiously at Tony's uncompromising back.

"Not back, Nina, love," said she to her daughter, cheerfully, "and ask Miss Harriet to come out and pour. I'll be there directly. We'll come right up. Run along."

To Nina, in this ignominious dismissal, there was sweet. She adored "Miss Harriet," the Miss Field who had been her governess and her mother's secretary for the three happiest years of Nina's somewhat sealed young life. It would be "fun" to have Miss Field pour. Nina leaped obediently up the steps, with a hopping of thick bruds and the scrape of sturdy shoes, and the sweet summer world was in silence again.

Isabelle sat on, stroking the hound, her soul filled with perplexity. Anthony's eloquent back gave her sudden understanding of his fury. "Ah, please, Tony," she pleaded, "what can I do?"

"Nothing," he answered, suddenly pliant. "Nothing, of course." And he turned to her a boyish stern with pain. "Of course you can do nothing, Charlie. I'm not such a—such a fool—" his voice broke angrily—"that I can't see that! Come on, we'll go up and have tea—with the Bellamys. And I—well, I'll be going tonight. I'll say good-by to you now—and perhaps you'll be good enough to make my good-bys to the others."

The youthfulness of it did not rob it of real dignity. Isabelle, wretchedly mounting the steps beside him, felt her heart contract with real pain. He would go away—it would all be over and forgotten in a few weeks—and yet, how she longed to comfort him, to make him happy again!

She looked obliquely at his set face, and what she saw there made her feel ashamed.

On the bright level of the upper terrace tea was nearly in progress. Miss Field had duly come down to preside, and all was well. Isabelle, as she dropped into a chair gave a sigh of relief; everyone was amused and absorbed and happy. Everyone, that is, except the magnificent and sharp-eyed old lady who sat, regally throned, near her, and favored her immediately with a disconcerting look. Old Madame Carter had her own good reasons for being more and she never used any

She was remarkably handsome, even at seventy-five; with a crown of pulled white hair, gold-rimmed eye-glasses, and an erect and finely preserved figure. Her voice was theatrically deep and clear, and her manner vigorous and impressive.

"Well, my dear, your friend—" were naturally wondering what important matter kept their hostess away from her guests," she began. Isabelle shrugged and smiled carelessly, with an indifferent glance at the group.

"Harriet is managing very nicely," she said, contentedly, as Tony, with a somber face and averted eyes, brought her her tea.

"So Ward seems to think," observed Ward's grandmother with acidity. Isabelle laughed indifferently. Her son, slender and tall, and with something of her own eagerness and fire in his sunburned young face, was beside Miss Field, who talked to him in a quiet aside while she busied herself with cups and spoons.

"Perfectly safe there!" Isabelle said.

"I should hope so!" old Madame Carter remarked, pointedly. "At least if there's any of our blood in his veins—but, of course, he's all Stocum. They used to say of my Aunt Georgina that she never married because the only man she ever loved was beneath her socially—"

Isabelle knew all about Aunt Georgina, and she looked wearily away. "The Bellamys are coming in for awhile,"

Distribution of Income

By GEORGE E. ROBERTS

(From the Monthly Bulletin Issued by The National City Bank of New York for February)

One of the most interesting questions to which statisticians have devoted study is that as to the total economic production and its distribution. What becomes of the industrial output of the country? For whose benefit does this great industrial organization function? In whose service are the thousands of factories running and the railroads kept in operation? For whose ultimate benefit are the great sums of capital raised, as represented by the daily bond and stock flotations, and the great industrial works projected? Do a few owners reap the benefits or are they widely diffused?

Studies of this subject have been made from time to time by individual investigators, but the amount of available data has been very much increased in this country by the enlargement of the work of the census and by income returns required by the government as the basis of taxation.

Of course it is very desirable that all such studies shall be conducted by parties whose findings will inspire confidence and be generally accepted.

National Bureau of Economic Research, Inc.

For the purpose of creating an organization for economic investigation whose findings would be generally accepted as trustworthy the "National Bureau of Economic Research, Inc." was organized in New York in 1920. The Board of Directors made up of economists—connected with Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Wisconsin, California and Michigan universities, together with persons representing certain well known organizations, as the American Economic Association, American Federation of Farm Bankers, American Federation of Labor, the Engineering Council, American Bankers Association, Intercollegiate Sociological Society, American Statistical Association, etc.

It was determined that the first study should be into the distribution of current income, and the results are now published in two volumes. It is possible to give only a brief statement of the results here, but every one interested should at least make an examination of Volume I.

A Conclusive Showing

In the table showing the "division of combined net value product of mines, factories and land transportation, between earnings of employees and returns for management and the use of property." The results are given in millions of dollars and also in percentages of the net value of the product, as follows:

Year	Wages and Salaries	Management and Property	Per Cent
1909....	$6,481	$2,250	68.7
1910....	7,150	2,350	69.8
1911....	7,287	2,791	71.6
1912....	8,293	3,169	72.9
1913....	8,631	3,579	73.8
1914....	7,972	2,816	71.5
1915....	9,919	3,470	74.2
1916....	11,630	3,813	75.3
1917....	14,375	4,502	76.3
1918....	17,472	5,124	77.3

Note: In this table "wages and salaries" includes pensions, compensation for accident, etc. "Management and property" includes rentals, royalties, interest and dividends.

by economic law, and not, as commonly assumed, by arbitrary power. They are not, in any general sense, within the control of employers, either singly or as a body, to fix as they please; nor can the general wage level be materially changed by organization among wage-earners. There are certain relationships throughout industry, which in the long run are bound to be maintained for the best interests of all; if the equilibrium is disturbed, the normal exchange of goods and services is interrupted, and although wages may be nominally high they are actually low when unemployment and the cost of living are taken into account. The latter is the state of things existing today.

The situation tends under the free play of natural forces to make the necessary adjustments and services which all classes have for exchange must be so valued to each other that the exchanges can be made. Wages must be high enough to enable the wage-earning class to buy and consume their normal share of the industrial product; otherwise products will accumulate and business will be bad. Likewise, farm products must have a purchasing power that will allow the farmers to take their usual share of goods, or unemployment in the other industries will result. Thus, every class, instead of being interested in fixing its own compensation without regard to the effect upon others, is interested in that right adjustment of values which enables the exchanges to be completely made, and in that manner serves the common interest.

When this idea of the necessary balance throughout industry is fully understood, the costly controversies and trials of strength, the "bloes" and various devices for imposing the will of small groups upon the community, will be seen to have been wholly misconceived and ineffective.

The Way of Real Progress

The way of real progress is not by petty efforts to "make work" or advance the interests of each group at the expense of the others, for these have the net result of nullifying each other and obstructing all progress, but by the improvement of methods, making labor more effective everywhere, thus bringing more of the comforts of life within the reach of every body. Every individual, whether he be employer or employee, who does not lend his efforts in good faith to accomplish this end is unfaithful to his social obligations.

When it is realized that seven-tenths to three-fourths of the industrial product goes direct for personal service, it will be appreciated how great are the gains to labor from industrial progress. Every invention, every installation, every investment of capital that increases the industrial output increases the income of labor by approximately three-quarters of the amount. Conversely, every scheme for reducing the efficiency of labor or compelling the unnecessary employment of labor, thereby increasing industrial costs, offsets and nullifies the achievements of inventors and industrial leaders, and slows down the rate of social progress.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By "Skinney"

Some of these slander or libel suits being disposed of by the Clearfield County Courts from time to time, remind one of the old time Clearfielder, who once brought an action against a local newspaper publisher for criminal libel, alleging defamation of character. The publication was very damaging to say the least. A few days before the day fixed for the trial, the defendant, who was somewhat of a wag came up street, his hat on one ear and a flush on his cheek denoting a libation, or two or three. When an acquaintance hailed him with, "Hello, —, why so jolly?" The plaintiff in the defamation of character suit replied, "I settled my damage suit." Asked for the details of the settlement, he informed the inquirer that he had received $25 cash and ten gallons of whiskey. Then as an afterthought he added, "You know I don't have very much character, but what I have, I'm d— careful of." History sometimes repeats itself.

Time lost by strikes in the coal mines represents but a small fraction of the time lost through other causes, according to a tabulation prepared by the United States Geological Survey. According to this bulletin the number of days lost in twenty years through causes other than strikes, such as car shortage and lack of demand, in all of the coal mines in the country was 1,178,323,907. In the same period strikes cost 124,747,199 days. Stated in percentages, strikes cost but 10.5 of the lost time, while other causes cost 89.5 per cent.

The table also shows that the bulk of the time lost and charged to the strikes was during "suspensions" in the industry when wage scales expired, these suspensions covering the time lost in making new agreements or renewing old ones.

Dr. George Craig Stewart, of Evanston, Ill., thinks present day college instruction runs to the physical and rather side-track the mental attributes of the average student. In a recent sermon, he said:

"Too many college students are being turned out as great big magnificent 'blond beasts' or 'brunette beasts' while up here in the sanctuary of the mind they have little, strangely undeveloped childish brains."

Production of cigarettes in the United States for the year 1921 established a new high record. The total was 51,844,378,478, an increase of 7,198,555,266 compared with 1920. Cigar production amounted to 6,758,749,826 and was a decrease of 1,208,271,866, compared with the previous year. The output of cigarettes last year registered a gain of 16 per cent. over 1920 while that of cigars decreased 15 per cent.

We can go along with Senator George Wharton Pepper the whole length of his expressed intention of seeing to it that the maimed and otherwise defective (by reason of their service) ex-service men get everything that is coming to them, but we quit more than half way this side of his determination to fight the soldier's bonus. The senator wants the country to forget the soldier offered his all on the altar of his country's service and the fact that the Fates allowed him to return home unscathed certainly does not discharge the liability of a grateful country to a valiant son. Many of them gave two years and more of their time and utmost effort for the paltry sum of $30 per month while risking life and limb. The war cost 20 billions, we had to pay that bill; the bonus may cost us two billions; we should be glad to pay that.

Calculating Admiration.

"Some men's admiration for an honest man," said Uncle Eben, "consists entirely in their belief that he makes an easier mark for a cheater."

A striking and "different" story, one that is as exceptional in the fascination it holds for the reader as it is out of the ordinary in its treatment.

The talented author of "The Story of Julia Page," "Sisters" and other novels, has written another charming, wholesome story which grips the heart in a manner characteristic of all her tales. A vivid, pulsating, human document. To be printed as a serial in these columns.

We are tempted to change the "o" to an "a" in the name of that fellow Bonomi. As Bonami we believe he would stand a better chance of cleaning up the Italian political situation.

The announced visit of the State Commander of the American Legion to this city next Tuesday should be an occasion for a municipal demonstration. An opportunity for everybody to meet the distinguished visitor will be afforded on Tuesday afternoon from four to six o'clock at the Legion headquarters. Later in the evening there will be a public meeting at the High School Auditorium. Let every citizen turn out to do honor to the Commander and his men.

Of the many things Clearfield has to be thankful for, and one that does not show up in industrial reports, is the American Legion Band. Had we known that M. Hoke Gottschall was going to give us such a treat we would have more than met him half way by engaging our band. Did the Bureau of Vital Statistics list musical organizations, Clearfield would be in the front rank there too. The concert last Sunday was the best one ever given here, barring none. The auditorium was packed and people were standing.

A number of cases to be tried at the next criminal court are cases involving infractions of the motor vehicle law and, judging from the names of the defendants, we are of the opinion that they are more of a test case variety. These cases will be watched with more or less interest, as owners of automobiles in many sections of the county think that they have been wronged by over-zealous officials who did not temper their official actions with reason and justice. There are many phases of the traffic laws which will bear interpretation, as apparently no allowance is made for the non-preventable predicament in which any motorist is likely to be placed by breakdown on the road.

It is a source of gratification to citizens generally that Senator Oscar Underwood and other leading Democrats have entered so wholeheartedly into the work of the Disarmament Conference and that they have carried on to the fulfillment of the aims of the conference without partisan intrusion.

This was truly a work in which the members of all parties could lend their aid, as there was no tinge of politics about it except as it effected the campaign pledges of President Harding, who expressed his belief that good could be accomplished by conferences between nations.

It was only the antagonists of a purely political, and not statesmen timber, who threw what little sand was thrown into the wheels of progress. The great Democratic party cannot be held responsible for the rantings of such as Mr. Cox, who, in his attempt to fasten his clutches on the party, will ultimately meet defeat.

"Do you know?" This was the introduction of Mr. M. Hoke Gottschall's able address at the Rotary Club meeting last evening.

And we did not know. Neither do very many people have any idea of the colossal proportions reached by Clearfield county industry. We bespeak the most careful reading of that part of his remarks which we are able to print today.

Mr. Gottschall has performed a singular service in coming up here to tell us what position we occupy in the industries of the state and the information he gave should spur our producers on to greater efforts. A considerable amount of information given in the address was even more interesting than that covered by the printed account of his address and The Progress is going to ask him for a prepared statement covering these things.

The people of Clearfield county should avail themselves of the wonderful fund of information gathered by the state department of which Mr. Gottschall is a valuable adjunct.

The monthly rent, the milk bill, the light bill, etc., etc., are not relished by any of us, but we pay them promptly and forget them.

If we could get into the habit of thinking that we owe our Savings Account a few dollars every so often to be paid and forgotten—it wouldn't be so long until it showed a very healthy balance.

Woman's Ills Make Unhappy Home

There is no question but what the ills of women conspire against domestic harmony. The husband cannot understand these troubles and the physician finds it hard to cure them; therefore the overworked wife and mother continues to drag around day in and day out with headaches and backache, fretful and nervous.

Such women should be guided by the experience of women whose letters we are continually publishing in this paper. Many of them declare that they have been restored to health strength and consequent happiness by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after doctors and all other medicines had failed to help them. It will surely pay women who suffer from such ailments to try it.

that 10,764 persons were engaged in this industry and that the number of employees, the county stood seventh in the state in bituminous mining. The wages paid in the bituminous fields of Pennsylvania in 1920 amounted to $299,657,500 and of this amount $18,617,900 was paid in Clearfield County and the county stood in eighth position in this respect. Clearfield County likewise stood eighth in tonnage produced, the total for the state being 167,700,400 of which amount 7,622,200 was produced in Clearfield County. The county was also eighth in the value of output, all of the bituminous coal in the state being worth $566,644,400 while that in Clearfield County was worth $33,491,800.

The 7,622,200 tons of bituminous coal taken from the mines in Clearfield County and sold for fuel was valued at $33,491,800," said Mr. Gottschall. "This treatment is most economical, because of the value of by-products contained in bituminous coal and which is disclosed when the coal is treated by the by-product coke process. Instead of $33,491,800 worth of coal, the actual value possible, if the coal had been put through the refinement process would have been $293,920,603."

The speaker divided this total to show that from the quantity of coal produced in the county there could have been produced 5,716,630 tons of by-product coke worth $37,615,557; 213,621,600 pounds of ammonia sulphate worth $9,185,832; 76,222,000 gallons of tar valued at $304,888,000; 36,677,700 gallons of benzol products worth $4,768,101; and 3,811,100 gallons of naphthalene worth $76,222.

In concluding his address, Mr. Gottschall said he was pleased that the Department of Internal Affairs at Harrisburg should be called upon to make public in such a manner the interesting industrial figures of Clearfield County. He stated that it was a pleasure at all times for Secretary James F. Woodward to sanction the appearance of representatives of the department at such meetings and he expressed the hope that in the future the business men of Clearfield and the County as a whole will keep in touch with the department for any information and service they may desire.

When a soldier plays the game, he does things which it requires a braver man than himself to accomplish; he never knows when he's done; he acknowledges no limit to his cheerfulness and strength; whatever his rank, he holds his life less valuable than that of the lowliest; he laughs at danger not because he does not dread it, but because he has learned that there are ailments more terrible and less curable than death.

PLAN UNIVERSITY FOR 10,000 STUDENTS AT STATE COLLEGE

A state institution of higher learning where ten thousand Pennsylvania boys and girls will be able to receive a college education at the lowest possible cost, can be expected eventually in the development of the Pennsylvania State College if the trustees are enabled to carry out the building program they approved at a recent meeting. While it may take ten, or even twenty years for the college to attain this end, there is so great a demand now being made upon existing cramped facilities that alumni and friends of Penn-State are pushing every effort to get the program under way.

The trustees have already decided to erect a unit of a dormitory for men and a greatly needed beef cattle barn with the $250,000 granted by the last State Legislature. The alumni are following this start with plans for raising $2,000,000 emergency building fund for the erection of such student recreational and facilities that the state can not provide. There is now room for only 3000 students, but the building extension plans when carried out will enable the college to admit all qualified students who apply instead of turning them away at the rate of a thousand a year, as is the case under present equipment. It is expected that ground will be broken in the very near future for the dormitory and the barn for the agricultural school. The dormitory will be part of a group planned to house 1000 men students.

Port Tico Arrived.

In the same year as Lovelace, or just three centuries ago, was born Abraham Cowley, who published his first book of poems at the age of fifteen and to whom fell the posthumous honor of leading off Samuel Johnson's "Lives of the Poets." Johnson ranked him among those he called the "metaphysical" poets and expressed a dislike for his far-fetched conceits with which the present-day reader would heartily coincide.

Just a Greeting.

Sister was taught not to ask for anything to eat when visiting. One day while calling on a neighbor she saw a dish filled with tempting candies. She looked at it longingly, then said: "Hello, candy!"

Daily Thought.

We think there are circumstances under which we can deal with men without love, and there are no such circumstances. You can cut down the trees and make bricks, or hammer iron without love, but you cannot deal with human beings without it.—Tolstol.

Ulster Force Augmented By Three Thousand And Armed Clash Is Feared

Belfast, Ireland, Feb. 10.—Three thousand Ulster volunteers today joined the forces of five thousand constables patrolling the Ulster frontier. The Sein Fein extremists who raided Ulster are still holding many captives. Sein Fein leaders whose forces are scattered along the Ulster border telegraphed Michael Collins it was feared the Ulstermen would commit further outrages, referring to reprisals for the kidnapping of 200 northerners. Both the Ulstermen and the Sein Feiners fear a further outbreak.

Good Red Blood and Health Will Follow if You Take This Advice

Johnstown, Pa.—"I can not say enough in praise of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the help it has given me. I take it as a blood purifier and as a tonic to build me up when run-down, also for sluggish and inactive liver and it always gives quick relief. 'Golden Medical Discovery' builds up the entire system and is one of the best medicines I have ever found for a bad cold or deep-seated cough. The 'Discovery' is an excellent family remedy and I am never without it in the home for use when needed."

Color This Valentine for Mother

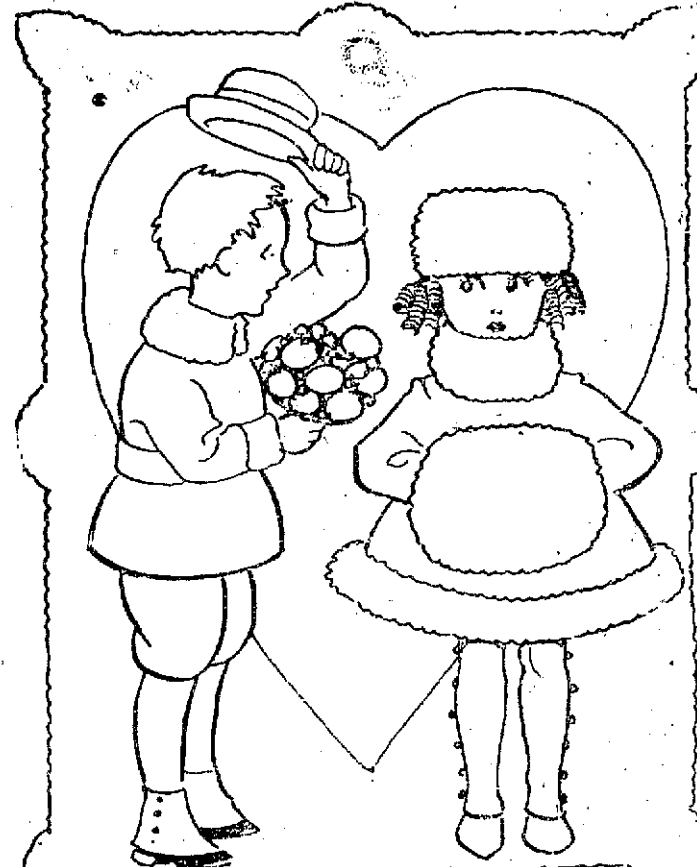

If everyone could have one wish
I know I'd pick for mine
A wish that you, my mother dear,
Would be my Valentine.

Mother will be glad to get this home-made valentine. Just cut it out, paste it on a stiff piece of cardboard and color it with crayons. Today The Progress will also give you one to color for Dad.

Color This Valentine for Dad

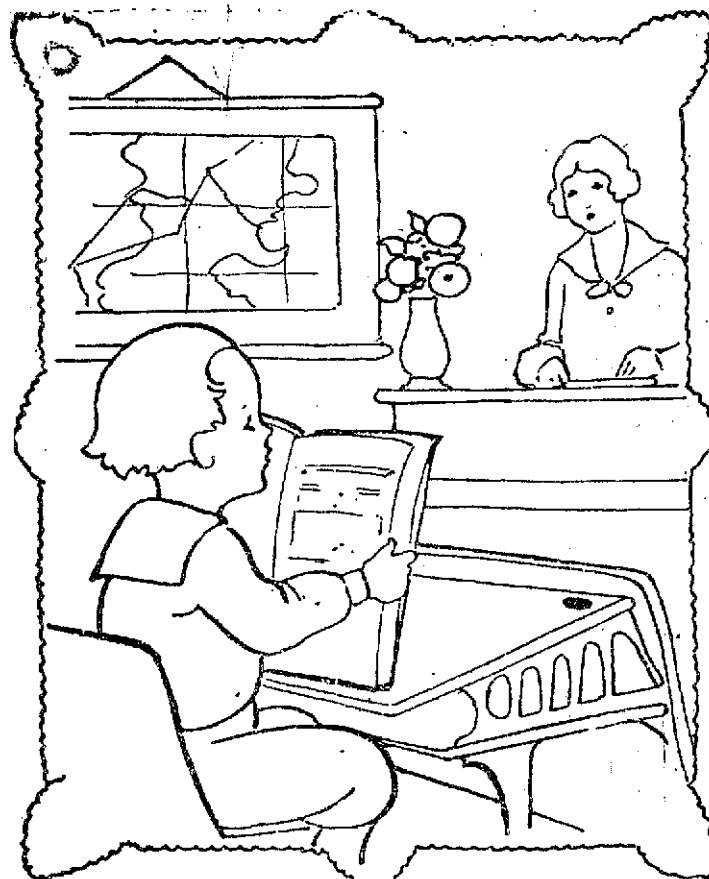

Mom says that you're a great man, Dad
Big hearted, strong and fine;
But please don't ever be too big
To be my Valentine.

Won't this tickle Dad? Just cut this valentine out, paste it on a stiff piece of cardboard and color it. Then give it to him on Valentine Day. There is one for baby.

Color This Valentine for Your Girl Friend

I've taken you to movie shows
And bought you lots of candy
Now, if you'll be my Valentine
I think that will be dandy.

A little bit of crayon will make this a fine home-made valentine for you to give to your girl friend. Cut it out and paste it on a piece of cardboard. Then color it neatly.

Color This Valentine for Teacher

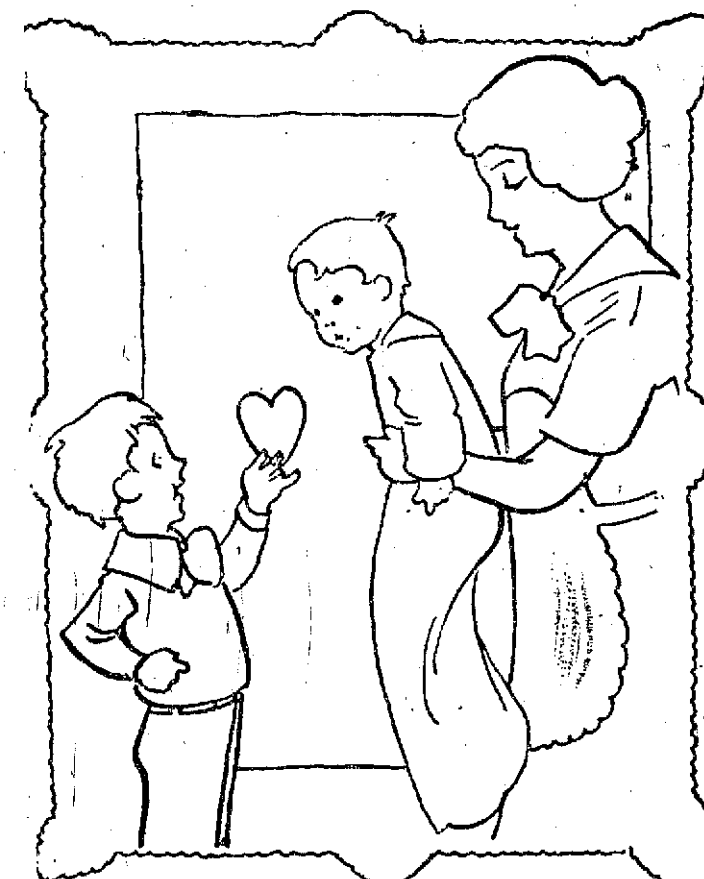

You've taught me not to whisper and
In school I seldom do,
But let me whisper "Won't you be
My Valentine?" to you.

But teacher will be surprised if you give her this valentine, all colored nicely with crayon. Cut it out and paste it on a stiff piece of cardboard before you color it and we give you a valentine for your little boy friend.

Color This Valentine for Your Boy Friend

Of all the little boy friends
That I know, or ever knew,
There's only one I want to be
My Valentine—that's you.

This will be just the valentine your little boy friend was looking for, if you make it for him yourself. Cut it out and paste it on a stiff piece of cardboard. Then color it with crayons. How about a valentine to color for your girl friend.

Color This Valentine for Baby

Say, darling little dimple cheeks,
Of Dad's and Mom's and mine,
Please nod your head when I ask you
To be my Valentine.

Maybe baby can't read this valentine but she'll like it just the same if you will color it brightly with crayons. Cut it out and paste it on a stiff piece of cardboard. Then crayon it in. Look for the one for teacher.

These four bureaus which bring the widespread public welfare activities of the state under one responsible head, the Commissioner of Public Welfare, are the Bureau of Restoration, the Bureau of Assistance, the Bureau of Children and the Bureau of Mental Health.

According to this plan of organization every institutional state agency maintained for the general good is assigned to one of these bureaus for purposes of administration, supervision or inspection.

The scope of each bureau was described as follows:

Kathleen Norris

The late William Dean Howells, one of our best loved authors and literary authorities, said of Kathleen Norris: "She puts the problem, or the fact, or the trait before you by quiet, vivid touches of portraiture or action. If she lacks the final touch of Frank Norris' power, she has the compensating gift of a more controlled and concentrated observation."

Kathleen Norris is one of that modern school which is bringing the Pacific Coast into such prominence as a seat of literary ability. She was born in San Francisco and has been writing since 1910. She has contributed short stories and serials to all the leading magazines and her books have been widely read. The latest to go into serial form is "Harriet and the Piper," which will be printed in this paper. It is a treat and we hope no present or prospective reader will miss it.

FIGHTING PARSON IS LIKED

Rev. Earl Blackman, National Chaplain of American Legion, is Regarded as Man's Man.

"Fighting parsons" were common during the World war, but those who actually fought were not. Rev. Earl Blackman, Kansas, earned his sobriquet, however. He has been elected national chaplain of the American Legion.

To make fun for the boys while in France, Reverend Blackman offered to box a match with any chaplain of the A. E. F. of his weight. He wasn't chosen Chaplain of the Legion for that reason, however, his followers declare. It was because "he is at all times a man's man and represents the liberal spirit of the organization."

Returning from France, Reverend Blackman resumed his pulpit in Chanute, Kan. One of his first acts was to attend a public dance. He didn't dance, but thoroughly enjoyed the fun. A protest came from his congregation and he resigned. His resignation wasn't accepted.

Then he began doing other things. He rigged up a gymnasium in the basement of his church and gave boxing lessons to the boys of the Sunday school. The church liked it.

Reverend Blackman refused offers from larger churches to stay with his pastorate in Chanute. His view of Sunday "blue laws" is characteristic: "To my mind the advocacy of such laws only serves to cheapen religion in the minds of the masses and tends to push it back into the superstitions of the past. What is rest and relaxation to the farmer may not be such to the bank clerk."
